

FINAL ANSWER KEY

Exam: THREE YEAR LLB 2022
Date of Test: 25-09-2022

Question1:-Read the following passage and answer the question

I can never forget that interview. He greeted me as a friend. He laughed away my pessimism. 'Do you think,' he said, 'that everyone must be a Pherozechah Mehta? Pherozechahs and Badruddins are rare. Rest assured it takes no unusual skill to be an ordinary lawyer. Common honesty and industry are enough to enable him to make a living. All cases are not complicated. Well, let me know the extent of your general reading.' When I acquainted him with my little stock of reading, he was, as I could see, rather disappointed. But it was only for a moment. Soon his face beamed with a pleasing smile and he said, 'I understand your trouble. Your general reading is meagre. You have no knowledge of the world, a sine qua non for a vakil. You have not even read the history of India. A vakil should know human nature. He should be able to read a man's character from his face. And every Indian ought to know Indian history. This has no connection with the practice of law, but you ought to have that knowledge. I see that you have not even read Kaye's and Malleson's history of the Mutiny of 1857. Get hold of that at once and also read two more books to understand human nature.' These were Lavator's and Shemmelpennick's books on physiognomy. I was extremely grateful to this venerable friend. In his presence I found all my fear gone, but as soon as I left him I began to worry again. 'To know a man from his face' was the question that haunted me, as I thought of the two books on my way home. The next day I purchased Lavator's book. Shemmelpennick's was not available at the shop. I read Lavator's book and found it more difficult than Snell's Equity, and scarcely interesting. I studied Shakespeare's physiognomy, but did not acquire the knack of finding out the Shakespeares walking up and down the streets of London.

According to the passage, what is the essential condition to become a successful lawyer?

- A:-Having the knowledge in History
- B:-Having the knowledge of the world
- C:-To read Lavato's book
- D:-To read Kaye's and Malleson's history of the Mutiny of 1857

Correct Answer:- Option-B

According to the passage, the author's reading is.....

- A:-Profound
- B:-Sufficient
- C:-Exiguous
- D:-Insignificant

Correct Answer:- Option-C

Question3:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

India's argument that the World Trade Organisation (WTO) should not negotiate rules on non-trade subjects like climate change is as old as it is flawed. That climate change is emerging as the most important global challenge is something India clearly understands and reflects in other fora. It is no longer possible to insulate 'vanilla' trade from sustainable trade. Rather than oppose, India must ensure that decisions in the WTO are compatible with multilateral climate agreements. . It must engage in framing rules that take into account different economic and technical capabilities of countries, particularly developing countries, including itself. Sticking to a position developed at a time when environmental and climate considerations were not central to economic activity puts India at a disadvantage. It also makes it sound guilty of not preaching what it has started to practise. It is short-sighted to deny that climate change, pollution and biodiversity loss do not have trade dimensions. The biggest economies have announced their intention to transition to a net-zero economy. Some like the EU are in the process of framing policies and regulations that will underpin this transition. India, too, has set its goal by 2070. Which makes it sotto voce admit that trade can't be insulated from reducing greenhouse gas emissions in its economy. At the same time, it must be acknowledged that developing countries will require more time and support to make the transition. Trade is central to growing economies, improving lives and livelihoods. Trade should be synced to this purpose of making the transition to a circular economy. As a country that is extremely vulnerable to climate change and focused on growing its economy, India, of all economies, must ensure that international trade rules facilitate - even accelerate - its transition. It must ensure that the rules do not impede its growth and development in a sustainable manner. By playing the game, it must ensure that the rules are fair. It can't do that by playing spoilsport.

Which one of the following statements is false as per the given passage.

- A:-Trade is detrimental to growing economies
- B:-Biggest economies are in the process of transition to net-zero economy
- C:-India targets to become net-zero economy by 2070
- D:-India is actively vouching for climate change initiatives other fora but not in WTO

Correct Answer:- Option-A

Question4:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

According to the passage, India's strategy should be.....

- A:-India should desist from discussing the non-trade issues at WTO
- B:-India should deliberate how to maximize the trade
- C:-India should ensure trade rules are fair and helps in transition of circular economy
- D:-India should not allow the developed countries to close their markets arbitrarily

Correct Answer:- Option-C

Question5:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

The grim images of the wreckage of a Tara Air de Havilland DHC-6-300 Twin Otter aircraft in Nepal have once again highlighted the complexities of ensuring aviation safety in one of the most challenging environments in the world, and in regulating the mountain nation's Short Take-off and Landing (STOL) flights that are a tourist draw. The plane with 22 passengers, including an Indian family, was on an 'air trek' along the scenic yet aerially treacherous Pokhara to Jomsom route on Sunday when it lost radar contact at around 13,000 feet. STOL operations call for well-honed piloting skills, and as 3-D terrain maps of the flight path show, danger lurks in every corner in the form of jagged peaks, narrow passes and fickle weather. The small unpressurised craft used in this sector operate at a ceiling of 13,000 feet and are airborne for a short duration — oxygen supplies are needed for all passengers if flights exceed over 30 minutes above 13,000 ft. Flights are characterised by manoeuvres of 90 degree turns in valleys that have at times just wing length clearance. And as in any competitive tourism market crowded with various STOL operators, there are many pressures that can tell on the crew: commercial stress points such as not having wasted fuel moments and ensuring passenger contentment by pushing the envelope of crucial visual flight rules (VFR). Not following VFR is cited as the main cause of accidents in Nepal's STOL operations. So, is Nepal pushing the boundaries in air safety? Data put out by the Civil Aviation Authority of Nepal show domestic air travel having risen by 15.45% in 2018, though registering a dip in 2019-20 largely on account of travel restrictions following the global COVID-19 pandemic. But, interestingly, country data over the past 10 years have shown a sharp drop in the accident rate in general, the only blip being a rise in helicopter incidents with growing copter operations in logistics, relief and rescue, and tourism. In the same timeframe, the STOL sector has seen a higher rate of accidents than trunk route air operations; of the 19 accidents, 16 were STOL aircraft. Accident analysis has shown Controlled Flight into Terrain, Runway excursions and Loss of Control In-flight as the leading causes. A more realistic check lies in the Universal Safety Oversight Audit Programme of the International Civil Aviation Organization monitoring safety oversight obligations by all 193 member-states (as of June 2020), in which Nepal's scores — it last participated in the programme in 2017 — dropped in 'Organization' and 'Accident Investigation'. In an era of improving global air safety, Nepal needs to scale a crucial summit by working on pending legislation that unbundles its civil aviation body into a regulator and service provider, paving the way for a full-fledged safety system, and in turn enabling safer STOL operations.

What is the main cause of air accidents in Nepal?

- A:-Rough terrain blocking visual ranges
  - B:-Flight crew fatigue
  - C:-Low level regulations
  - D:-Not adhering to visual flight rules by pilots
- Correct Answer:- Option-D

Question6:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

The grim images of the wreckage of a Tara Air de Havilland DHC-6-300 Twin Otter aircraft in Nepal have once again highlighted the complexities of ensuring aviation safety in one of the most challenging environments in the world, and in regulating the mountain nation's Short Take-off and Landing (STOL) flights that are a tourist draw. What is the crucial reform that Nepal has to do to improve air safety?

- A:-Train the pilots to handle in short take-off and landing
  - B:-Decoupling regulatory function from service providing civil aviation body
  - C:-To purchase advanced helicopters
  - D:-To put automatic warning systems in helicopters
- Correct Answer:- Option-B

Question7:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

The crash in the price of cryptocurrencies is a timely reminder to retail investors to stay far away from this highly speculative asset class. Bitcoin, the most popular cryptocurrency, has lost over two-thirds of its value since its peak in November last year and has wiped out many retail investors. Other cryptocurrencies have witnessed even larger losses with some (Luna) plunging to zero. The current crash was a long time in the making. Cryptocurrencies were initially touted to be alternatives to fiat currencies. Since the supply of a lot of cryptocurrencies is limited by design, investing in them seemed like a good way to protect one's wealth from inflation fuelled by central banks. But as it became obvious that cryptocurrencies have had very little acceptance as money, crypto-enthusiasts began to argue a slightly different case. Cryptocurrencies were now touted as an independent asset class like gold and silver that could serve as an effective hedge in times of crisis. The crash in the crypto market amidst wider market correction has put to rest the argument that crypto, as an asset class, is as good a hedge as precious metals. There is little reason to believe that cryptocurrencies possess any intrinsic value that can make them serve the role of widely accepted money or as a legitimate asset class such as precious metals. The acceptability of cryptocurrencies in the wider economy has remained minuscule and there are no signs of their use for purposes other than wild speculation. But the only tailwind that has kept cryptocurrencies rallying despite concerns about their fundamental or intrinsic value has been the climate of easy monetary policy adopted by central banks. Easy money from central banks fuelled the rise of a get-rich-quick industry that depended on selling to a greater fool. Just as Internet stocks and tulip bulbs were the hallmarks of liquidity-fuelled bubbles in the past, cryptocurrencies are the leading symbol of the current bubble in markets. But perhaps the biggest threat to their prospects has been an existential one. Governments and their central banks have been largely unwilling to recognise cryptocurrencies as a legitimate investment asset. They are also unlikely to recognise private cryptocurrencies as they infringe on the state's fiscal and monetary authority. Moreover, this hostile attitude is at least partly to blame for the shady nature of the crypto industry at large. Retail investors looking for quick market gains have had to plunge into an unregulated space marked by scams and other pitfalls in the absence of a legal environment that can protect investor interests. So, regardless of the investment prospects of cryptocurrencies, a proper regulatory framework may help in protecting retail investors, at least from outright scams.

Cryptocurrencies are.....

- A:-Legal
  - B:-Regulated
  - C:-Unregulated
  - D:-Best hedge against uncertainties
- Correct Answer:- Option-C

Question8:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

The crash in the price of cryptocurrencies is a timely reminder to retail investors to stay far away from this highly speculative asset class. According to the passage, the Government may not place any regulatory mechanism to control cryptocurrencies because.....

- A:-Cryptocurrencies are big scams
  - B:-Cryptocurrencies are known to give poor returns
  - C:-Cryptocurrencies are invading the regulatory sphere of the Government
  - D:-Cryptocurrencies are impossible to regulate

Question9:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

Buoyed by increasing demand, growing exports and government initiatives, "Made in India" smartphones have been gaining momentum. According to the latest research from Counterpoint's Make in India service, smartphone shipments increased 7 per cent year-on-year in Q1 2022 to reach over 48 million units. According to the report, despite global component shortages, the local smartphone manufacturing ecosystem has remained resilient. As per Senior Research Analyst Prachir Singh, "Smartphone manufacturing is increasing in India. In 2021, the shipments of 'Made in India' smartphones crossed 190 million units. The increasing smartphone demand, as well as increasing exports, are the major reasons for the continued growth." "Support has also come from the Indian government's initiatives to increase local manufacturing." However, Singh added that the manufacture of feature phones declined 41 per cent YoY in Q1 2022 due to falling demand in the past few quarters. Third-party EMS (electronic manufacturing services) providers captured a 42 per cent share of local manufacturing in the smartphone segment, recording a 4 per cent YoY growth in terms of shipments. Bharat FIH was the top EMS provider in Q1 2022, followed by Dixon Technologies. "However, in-house manufacturing capabilities have also grown. In-house smartphone manufacturing share crossed 58 per cent during the quarter," Singh said. Oppo led 'Made in India' smartphone shipments with a 22 per cent share, followed by Samsung at 21 per cent. Vivo, Bharat FIH and Dixon rounded out the top five, with 11.7 per cent, 11.3 per cent and an 8.6 per cent share, respectively. In the feature phone segment, however, EMS's share crossed 68 per cent in Q1 2022. Lava led the "Made in India" feature phone shipments with a 21 per cent share. "Among the third-party EMS providers, Flex, Bharat FIH and Dixon Technologies led the feature phone segment," Singh said. According to Research Analyst Priya Joseph, "The government's focus has been to make India a manufacturing hub. It has taken a lot of initiatives in this direction. The Production Linked Incentive (PLI) scheme for mobile handsets proved to be an accelerator for local manufacturing." "Similar PLI schemes have been introduced by the government in other strategic sectors such as solar, semiconductors, automobiles, and electronic products. In times of uncertainty triggered by the pandemic, war, and other factors, the government feels it is important to have a resilient economy that can sustain such shocks. Signing up for the recent Indo-Pacific Economic Framework for Prosperity (IPEF) is one such example of the government's intention to make clear its goal of becoming the next tech hub," added Joseph. Moving forward, India's handset manufacturing is expected to grow by 4 per cent YoY in 2022, the report said. "Also, the increasing local value addition will drive the idea of "Aatmanirbhar Bharat," the report further added.

What is the main reason for increased growth of smartphone manufacturing in India?

- A:-Government schemes
  - B:-Increasing demand
  - C:-Reduced imports
  - D:-Reduced cost
- Correct Answer:- Option-B

Question11:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

A common thread links many of our contemporary anxieties about the future, from authoritarian backsliding in Russia to corruption in India, to failed states in the developing world, to entrenched interest groups in contemporary American politics. It concerns the difficulties of creating and maintaining effective political institutions, governments that are simultaneously powerful, rule bound, and accountable. This might seem like an obvious point that any fourth grader would acknowledge, and yet on further reflection it is a truth that many intelligent people fail to understand. Let's begin with the question of the receding of the third wave and the democratic recession that has taken place around the world in the 2000s. The reasons for our disappointments in the failure of democracy to spread do not lie, I would argue, on the level of ideas at the present moment. Ideas are extremely important to political order; it is the perceived legitimacy of the government that binds populations together and makes them willing to accept its authority. The fall of the Berlin Wall marked the collapse of one of democracy's great competitors, communism, and the rapid spread of liberal democracy as the most widely accepted form of government. This is true up to the present, where democracy, in Amartya Sen's words, remains the "default" political condition: "While democracy is not yet universally practiced, nor indeed universally accepted, in the general climate of world opinion democratic governance has achieved the status of being taken to be generally right: Very few people around the world openly profess to admire Vladimir Putin's petronationalism, or Hugo Chavez's "twenty-first-century socialism," or Mahmoud Ahmadinejad's Islamic Republic. No important international institution endorses anything but democracy as the basis for just governance. China's rapid growth incites envy and interest, but its exact model of authoritarian capitalism is not one that is easily described, much less emulated, by other developing countries. Such is the prestige of modern liberal democracy that today's would-be authoritarians all have to stage elections and manipulate the media from behind the scenes to legitimate themselves. Not only has totalitarianism virtually disappeared from the world; authoritarians pay a compliment to democracy by pretending to be democrats. Democracy's failure, then, lies less in concept than in execution: most people around the world would strongly prefer to live in a society in which their government was accountable and effective, where it delivered the sorts of services demanded by citizens in a timely and cost-effective way. But few governments are actually able to do both, because institutions are weak, corrupt, lacking capacity, or in some cases absent altogether. The passion of protesters and democracy advocates around the world, from South Africa to Korea to Romania to Ukraine, might be sufficient to bring about "regime change" from authoritarian to democratic government, but the latter will not succeed without a long, costly, laborious, and difficult process of institution building.

What is the prerequisite for the success of the democratic government?

- A:-Resources
- B:-People

- C:-Political will
- D:-Institutions

Correct Answer:- Option-D

Question13:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

The main religion in Okinawa is known as Ryukyū Shinto. Ryukyū is the original name of the Okinawa archipelago, and Shinto means "the path of the gods." 1 Ryukyū Shinto combines elements of Chinese Taoism, Confucianism, Buddhism, and Shintoism with shamanistic and animistic elements. According to this ancient faith, the world is populated by an infinite number of spirits divided into several types: spirits of the home, of the forest, of the trees, and of the mountains. It is important to appease these spirits through rituals and festivals, and by consecrating sacred grounds. Okinawa is full of sacred jungles and forests, where many of the two main kinds of temples are found: the utaki and the uganju. We visited an uganju, or small, open-air temple adorned with incense and coins, next to a waterfall in Ogimi. The utaki is a collection of stones where people go to pray and where, supposedly, spirits gather. In Okinawa's religious practice, women are considered spiritually superior to men, whereas the opposite is true of traditional Shintoism in the rest of Japan. Yuta are women chosen as mediums by their communities to make contact with the spirit realm through traditional rites. Ancestor worship is another important feature of spiritual practice in Okinawa, and in Japan in general. The home of each generation's firstborn usually contains a butsudān, or small altar, used to pray for and make offerings to the family's ancestors.

Okinawans communicate with the spirits through.....

- A:-Shaman
- B:-Yuta
- C:-Uganju
- D:-Water

Correct Answer:- Option-B

Question14:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

The main religion in Okinawa is known as Ryukyū Shinto. Ryukyū is the original name of the Okinawa archipelago, and Shinto means "the path of the gods." Ryukyū Shinto combines elements of Chinese Taoism, Confucianism, Buddhism, and Shintoism with shamanistic and animistic elements. According to this ancient faith, the world is populated by an infinite number of spirits divided into several types: spirits of the home, of the forest, of the trees, and of the mountains. It is important to appease these spirits through rituals and festivals, and by consecrating sacred grounds. Okinawa is full of sacred jungles and forests, where many of the two main kinds of temples are found: the utaki and the uganju. We visited an uganju, or small, open-air temple adorned with incense and coins, next to a waterfall in Ogimi. The utaki is a collection of stones where people go to pray and where, supposedly, spirits gather. In Okinawa's religious practice, women are considered spiritually superior to men, whereas the opposite is true of traditional Shintoism in the rest of Japan. Yuta are women chosen as mediums by their communities to make contact with the spirit realm through traditional rites. Ancestor worship is another important feature of spiritual practice in Okinawa, and in Japan in general. The home of each generation's firstborn usually contains a butsudān, or small altar, used to pray for and make offerings to the family's ancestors.

According to the passage, which religion considers men to be spiritually superior to women?

- A:-Ryukyū Shinto
- B:-Shintoism
- C:-Utaki
- D:-Ogimi

Correct Answer:- Option-B

Question15:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

A slice of moon glided between bare tree branches, and brittle tufts of brown grass crunched beneath her feet as Laura Reed crossed the Village Green. Tiny white Christmas lights were still suspended in the trees. By next week the diligent Cape Christian Parks Department would have them all down, but for now they were a twinkling reminder of the holiday just passed. Laura shoved her hands deep into her coat pockets and shivered. She was used to tramping around town in her parka, a heavy sweater, and boots in this weather. But she and her husband, Jimmy, had plans for a New Year's Eve dinner, so she was wearing stockings and heels, a silk blouse, and a skirt under her good wool coat. The December chill seemed to cut right through her. Despite the cold, she loved to walk through town. Cape Christian, a little jewel of preserved Victoriana perched on the southern tip of the New Jersey shore, was picturesque at any time of year. The branches of huge shade trees arched over the quiet streets and screened the rows of old homes that were fastidiously maintained and festooned with intricately carved gingerbread. From almost any corner on Main Street you could catch a glimpse of the ocean, just visible beyond the promenade that formed the eastern border of the town. In the summertime huge crowds of tourists flocked here to drink in the quaint atmosphere of another century while they vacationed at the beach. Jimmy Reed had been born and raised in this town, and when he'd brought Laura back here, he'd promised her she would soon grow to love it. He was right. She did love Cape Christian at any time of year, but, like a native, she loved it most in the dead of winter, when the streets were deserted and the town was steeped in silence beside the beating heart of the sea.

Which of the following statements is true as per the above passage.

- A:-Laura loved Cape Christian the most when huge crowds of tourists flocked here for vacation
- B:-Cape Christian was picturesque only during winter
- C:-Village green had lush green grass at the time of winter diligently maintained by the Parks Department
- D:-The Parks Department is a very meticulous regulatory body

Correct Answer:- Option-D

  - B:-After Christmas
  - C:-Before Christmas
  - D:-After New Year
- Correct Answer:- Option-B

Question17:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

In 2004 The New York Times interviewed Stephen Hawking, the scientist whose incurable motor-neuron disease left him paralyzed and unable to talk at age 21. Through his computer, Hawking told the interviewer how excited he was to sell books to lay people. "Are you always this cheerful?" the Times asked. "My expectations were reduced to zero when I was 21. Everything since then has been a bonus," he replied. Expecting things to be great means a best-case scenario that feels flat. Pessimism reduces expectations, narrowing the gap between possible outcomes and outcomes you feel great about. Maybe that's why it's so seductive. Expecting things to be bad is the best way to be pleasantly surprised when they're not. Which, ironically, is something to be optimistic about.

According to the passage, life would be.....

- A:-Pleasant when pessimistic
  - B:-Pleasant when optimistic
  - C:-Sad when pessimistic
  - D:-None of the above
- Correct Answer:- Option-A

Question18:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

In his book on 1930s America, Frederick Lewis Allen wrote that the Great Depression "marked millions of Americans—inwardly—for the rest of their lives." But there was a range of experiences. Twenty-five years later, as he was running for president, John F. Kennedy was asked by a reporter what he remembered from the Depression. He remarked: I have no first-hand knowledge of the Depression. My family had one of the great fortunes of the world and it was worth more than ever then. We had bigger houses, more servants, we traveled more. About the only thing that I saw directly was when my father hired some extra gardeners just to give them a job so they could eat. I really did not learn about the Depression until I read about it at Harvard. This was a major point in the 1960 election. How, people thought, could someone with no understanding of the biggest economic story of the last generation be put in charge of the economy? It was, in many ways, overcome only by JFK's experience in World War II. That was the other most widespread emotional experience of the previous generation, and something his primary opponent, Hubert Humphrey, didn't have. The challenge for us is that no amount of studying or open-mindedness can genuinely recreate the power of fear and uncertainty. I can read about what it was like to lose everything during the Great Depression. But I don't have the emotional scars of those who actually experienced it. And the person who lived through it can't fathom why someone like me could come across as complacent about things like owning stocks.

The above passage best supports the statement .....

- A:-Rich get richer poor get poorer
  - B:-All that glitters is not gold
  - C:-Familiarity breeds contempt
  - D:-We see the world through a different lens

Question19:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness, it was the epoch of belief, it was the epoch of incredulity, it was the season of Light, it was the season of Darkness, it was the spring of hope, it was the winter of despair, we had everything before us, we had nothing before us, we were all going direct to Heaven, we were all going direct the other way—in short, the period was so far like the present period that some of its noisiest authorities insisted on its being received, for good or for evil, in the superlative degree of comparison only.

The statement refers an age of.....taking place at the same time.

- A:-Renaissance
  - B:-Colonialism
  - C:-Radical opposites
  - D:-Revolution
- Correct Answer:- Option-C

Question20:-Read the following passage and answer the question.

During the discussions on seditions at Constitution Assembly, Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar said: If we find that the government for the time being has a knack of entrenching itself, however bad its administration might be it must be the fundamental right of every citizen in the country to overthrow that government without violence, by persuading the people, by exposing its faults in the administration, its method of working and so on. The word 'sedition' has become obnoxious in the previous regime. We had therefore approved of the amendment that the word 'sedition' ought to be removed, except in cases where the entire state itself is sought to be overthrown or undermined by force or otherwise, leading to public disorder; but any attack on the government itself ought not to be made an offence under the law. We have gained that freedom and we have ensured that no government could possibly entrench itself, unless the speeches lead to an overthrow of the State altogether.

What is the main message of the above given passage?

- A:-Sedition provision was rampantly being used
  - B:-Sedition should cover all aspects of expressing dissent against administration
  - C:-Sedition should be very narrowly defined to include only issues leading to public disorder
  - D:-Sedition provision should be abolished
- Correct Answer:- Option-C
